

I Can Read!™

BEGINNING
1
READING

THE FAT CAT SAT ON THE MAT

NURIT KARLIN

To Shira and Zohar

HarperCollins®, and I Can Read Book® are trademarks of HarperCollins Publishers Inc.

The Fat Cat Sat on the Mat Copyright © 1996 by Nurit Karlin All rights reserved. No part of this book may be used or reproduced in any manner whatsoever without written permission except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical articles and reviews. Manufactured in China. For information address HarperCollins Children's Books, a division of HarperCollins Publishers, 195 Broadway, New York, NY 10007. www.harpercollinschildrens.com

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Karlin, Nurit.

The fat cat sat on the mat / written and illustrated by Nurit Karlin.

p. cm.—(An I can read book)

Summary: Rat tries to get the fat cat off the mat and back to his usual resting place in the vat.

ISBN-10: 0-06-026673-2 (trade bdg.) — ISBN-13: 978-0-06-026673-8 (trade bdg.)

ISBN-10: 0-06-026674-0 (lib. bdg.) — ISBN-13: 978-0-06-026674-5 (lib. bdg.)

ISBN-10: 0-06-444246-2 (pbk.) — ISBN-13: 978-0-06-444246-6 (pbk.)

[1. Cats—Fiction. 2. Rats—Fiction. 3. Witches—Fiction. 4. Brooms and brushes—Fiction. 5. Stories in rhyme.] I. Title. II. Series.

PZ3.K1266Fat 1996

[E]—dc20

95-25952

CIP

AC

19 20 21 SCP 65 64

THE FAT CAT SAT ON THE MAT

written and illustrated by
NURIT KARLIN

 HarperCollinsPublishers

She also has a fat cat

and a pet rat.

Wilma loves her pet rat.

She calls the rat

“my little brat.”

“This is MY mat!” said the rat.

“So what,” said the cat.

“So get off!” said the rat.

“No I won’t,” said the cat.

“Then I will go and get my bat,”
said the rat.

“It will get you off the mat.”

“No it won’t,” said the cat.

“This is the mat of the rat,”
said the bat.

“So what,” said the cat.

“So get off!” said the bat.

“No I won’t,” said the cat.

“Then I will go and get my hat,”
said the bat.

“It will get you off the mat.”

“No it won’t,” said the cat.

“This is the mat of the rat,”

said the hat.

“So what,” said the cat.

“So get off!” said the hat.

“No I won’t,” said the cat.

“I am a cat, and I am fat.

No rat, no bat, no hat

can move me.

I shall sit on this mat

for as long as I wish.”

“We shall see,” said the hat.

“Look what we have,” said the hat.
“Big deal, a dish,” said the cat.
“A dish and what else?” asked the hat.
“Mmmm . . . a fish!” said the cat.
“A fish on a dish,” said the hat.
“For me?” asked the cat.
“Yes, for you,” said the hat.

“Bring it closer,” said the cat.
“Come and get it,” said the hat.

“You think I am stupid,”

said the cat.

“You want to get me off the mat.

I won’t get off, and that is that!”

Rat-a-tat . . .

“What was that?” asked the bat.

“I don’t know,” said the hat.

Rat-a-tat . . .

“It sounds like a rat with a tat,”
said the cat.

“It is not me,” said the rat.

“What is a tat?” asked the bat.

“I don’t know,” said the hat.

“Look! The broom!” cried the bat.

The broom flew into the room.
It zoomed over the mat,
over the cat,

over the hat and the bat
and Wilma's pet rat.

The fish flew off the dish.

It landed on the hat,

which landed on the bat,

who landed on the rat,

who landed on the cat,
lying flat on the mat.

“Get off!” said the cat.

“No we won’t!” said the hat
and the bat and the rat.

The fish said nothing.

Wilma came home.
She looked at the room.
She picked up the broom.
Then she asked,
“Why is the fish out of the dish?”

“Because of the cat,” said the rat.
“The fat cat sat on my mat!”

“My dear little brat,” said Wilma,
“what makes you think this is YOUR mat?”

The fat cat smiled.

The fat cat got up
and stretched.
Off flew the rat, the bat,
and the hat.

He ate the fish,
licked the dish,
and went back
to lie down in the vat.

“Thank goodness!”
said the mat.